

I am very concerned about the fact that the FCC is considering implementing a proposal that will lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law.

I have recently moved so I will not the Privacy Law implemented on my new phone number until Jan, 2003. I get dozens of unwanted solicitors calling through the day. This interrupts quality family/friend time especially in the evenings. When I was on the do not call list at my old phone number the amount of unwanted calls was significantly reduced.

I urge those of you considering to change Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law to think about your quality time in the evenings and how you'd like to spend that time? with family or friends or even just a quiet evening watching TV? Or would you rather get up 50 times a night to answer the phone to only find an annoying telemarketer on the other end?
